Father Darkleaf

BY CALVIN ROBINSON

Welcome to the month of June. No major holidays, but lots of anniversaries. Kentucky was admitted to the Union June 1, 1792 and Tennessee June 1, 1796. Jefferson Davis was born June 3, 1808. June recalls 'D-Day' in World War II. Patrick Henry died June 6, 1799. Virginia's Cyrus McCormick patented his invention of the reaper June 21, 1831. Robert E. Lee and Mary Page Custis were married June 30, 1831. June is the month of brides and graduates. Ah yes, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Edmonds, formerly of Appomattox, now of Lawrenceville, named their first son "Calvin" in my honor. Aubrey was employed with the Times-Virginian for several years. Calvin is among this year's high school graduates. Best wishes to all the graduates, newlyweds and everyone to whom June is a special month. For Appomattox let us make it a growing month and a safe month.

One way to get rain is to write about how dry it is. I tried that and it worked. Now things are growing. I finally found some yellow tomato plants, and boldly staked'em when gave them garden space. Thus far all is well. How's your garden?

For a brief period, Appomattox had two newspapers. The Appomattox and Buckingham TIMES and The Southside Virginian. In 1935 The Farmville HERALD published a History gem, "Today and Yesterday in The Heart of Virginia" and I am proud to have a copy of same. I have always considered The Farmville HERALD to be one of Virginia's top newspapers and value the friendship of its publisher, J. Barrye Wall. It seems that in 1829 there was a newspaper at Scottsville called The Scottsville AURORA. In 1832 it moved to Farmville and became The Farmville CHRONICLE. There followed several changes of ownership and name. It became The Farmville REPUBLICAN and then The Farmville JOURNAL. After a suspension during The War Between the States publication was resumed and shortly thereafter became The Farmville NEWS. In 1870 another change resulted in the name NEW COMMONWEALTH and in 1872 The Farmville COMMONWEALTH and later The Farmville MERCURY. The Farmville HERALD, the present name, was established November 15, 1890 and acquired by the present owner in 1921. This may seem a bit complicated & I hope I have it correct, but I menfion it to salute a splendid newspaper and its publisher and staff. Weekly newspapers are a quality community asset and merit your support. Incidently, newspaper files are a valuable history of an area.

Have just seen the 1977 football schedule of my alma mater, University of Richmond and it is a rugged listing. West Virginia, North Carolina, North Texas State, VPI, VMI, Georgia, Maryland, East Carolina, Furman, William and Mary and Appalachian State. Other state schools have equally ambitious slates, and competition is keen at the high school level. Many fans like to get season tickets in advance. ACHS had a good year, sportswise.

The annual rush to have the first garden ripe tomatoes is on. I will not be the first, but aim to be ready...A friend and neighbor, K. E. Coleman had three vine ripe tomatoes on his plants Monday, but alas, someone walked by and the three tomatoes were no longer there Monday night.

County Extension Staff Received Unit Award

The Appomattox County Extension Staff received the Extension Unit Award last Wednesday evening at the Awards Banquet of Epsilon Sigma Phi at Virginia Tech.

The award was in the form of a citation and plaque. The citation read:

"The unit staff works together as a team to provide educational opportunities and to assist clientele in solving area problems. The educational programs are available to all citizens of the county. The agents have a wide variety of expertise which they bring together to provide a diversified program representing the total Extension Division in the county.

The unit staff involves all geographical, economic and racial groups in all phases of program development. They involve a large number of organizations and committees in program planning, implementation and evaluation. They develop programs as a staff and assist each other through a cooperative spirit in implementing and evaluating those programs.

Rural values are strong in this county, yet pressing increases of urbanization with its opportunities and problems is a major affect in the lives of the citizens. The needs for maximum use of limited resources (land, public facilities, tax dollars of the county); improvement, in management and marketing of farm commodities; adequate housing; economic development and additional employment opportunities; additional and more diversified recreational opportunities; health and family stability; leadership development; and improvement of environmental quality are major problems that form the basis for Extension's thrust.

Through Extension program efforts the people are making progress in local planning, leadership involvement, improved consumer practices, improved housing, better nutrition and health practices, improved family communications, youth involvement in personal and citizenship development, community and economic development, planning and zoning, and environmental improvement."

The plaque was inscribed as follows: In recognition for Outstanding Team Achievement Appomattox Extension Staff - Cornell B. Goldman, James A. Smith, Frank H. Sweet, Shirley W. Walton by Aphs Gamma Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi.

Epsilon Sigma Phi is the National Honorary Extension Fraternity that has chapters in each state.

J. A. Smith, Extension Agent, expressed appreciation for the excellent support from the secretarial staff and the people of Appomattox County that made the award possible.
